

1. Ideally, I like to have my lab preparation completed at least a day in advance so I have time to review and make sure I fully understand the material. That said, I'm also comfortable finishing the night before, as long as I've taken the time to properly understand the work I've done.
2. For questions regarding the lab, better to just text online through any social media platform. It would also be nice to discuss 5 minutes prior to the lab starting to consolidate all parts of the lab so we both understand the material.
3. If it's a small disagreement, I will just text about it. For larger disagreements, raising the issue in person might be better. I don't usually have many conflicts in group settings, but if something arises, I will make sure to communicate it to my partner.
4. We are aligned as we both don't have many conflicts, and are approximately on the same deadline for when to have the lab preparation by. Also, both of us like to communicate online through text.
